On January 31st, 2004, the Puerto Rican Folkloric Dance & Cultural Center held an Art Show & Vejigante Mask Workshop as part of the "Workshops on Puerto Rican Studies" program. Featured was Artist Lucy Llera. Over 50 adults and children attended this fun event. Thanks to our massive mailing list, promotions by the Austin Chronicle, and radio stations around town, over half the attendants were new faces to our cultural center and to our culture! Some drove in from as far away as San Antonio to attend this event!

Adults enjoyed Lucy's van-load of paintings, rich in Puerto Rican cultural themes and beautiful carnival masks from Puerto Rico. The children colored pictures of dancing vejigantes, learned the significance of mask-wearing, and the history behind the vejigante masks of Puerto Rico. The children also enjoyed making vejigante masks of their very own, and danced with a "real" vejigante who made a surprise visit!

The Art Show & Workshop culminated in a celebration of the PRFDance Cultural Center's first birthday. While our organization has been ongoing since 1997, our physical location opened its doors on February 1st of last year (2003). The children gathered around a big birthday cake and sang happy birthday to the Escuelita in Spanish and English. Their favorite part was when they ALL got to blow out the candle!

We are so proud that this event was so well received by our community. We plan on having Lucy back to do a more complex workshop on mask-making in the future!

Saludos from the Founding Director

Saludos and Happy 1st Birthday to our Cultural Center!

Although PRFDance is in its 7th year, it was only one year ago that our Puerto Rican Folkloric Dance & Cultural Center opened its first physical location. I am sure those who have been with us since before this great accomplishment will agree -- it has been an exciting year of growth and change!

Before "Our Escuelita" opened, our programs took place in locations rented on an hourly basis. The difficulty in finding consistent and available studio time limited our growth. Thanks to our new home, we are now proud to offer over 10 distinct programs in cultural and performing arts education, which have greatly expanded the number of participants we serve. Over 60 each week enjoy programs such as our traditional dance classes for children through adults. The dance program expanded this year when we graduated our first group of children into a new Preteen class that challenged their increased skill-level and made room for new young children.

Our music program expanded this year to include not only a music ensemble but a youth choir and a percussion class. We also now offer fun, non-performance classes such as Salsa and Ritmo Aerobics for those in our community who want to enjoy informal programs set to high-energy music! With a permanent location, our Workshop on Puerto Rican Studies can once again engage the community in cultural education beyond performing arts -- an Art Show and Vejigante Workshop was presented this spring.

"Puerto Rican Folkloric Dance," our 24-member professional-level performing company of dancers and musicians, now has a permanent home to rehearse and store costumes, props and instruments. Although we are excited about our program growth, we are the most proud of the feeling of community our new Cultural Center home has created. Over the last year I have enjoyed watching friendships bloom -- children through adults alike. It's been exciting to hear the plans for pajama parties, dance-club outings, and lunch dates that ring through our hall!

The presence of our Cultural Center brings a unique spotlight to Austin and the State of Texas that did not exist before. There are few places in the country where the local community can enjoy what we offer. The accomplishments of this last year alone has been TREMENDOUS and there are GREAT PROMISES of more to come. Thank YOU for your investment in this unique slice of hispanic culture we bring to Austin. I know you are just as proud as we are!

Con cariño, su servidora,
Dr. Ana Maria Maynard, Founding Director

Puerto Rican Mojito

A tangy salsa made from tomatoes, capers and cilantro...not Cuba's national rum cocktail!

Puerto Rican Mojito is traditionally served as a dipping sauce for plantain chips and tostones. It's also great for dipping tortilla chips, and it makes an uncommon cocktail sauce for shrimp and other seafood.

- | | |
|-------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------|
| 6 aji dulce peppers, or 1 ½ tsp diced red bell pepper | 1 ½ tsp dried oregano |
| ½ green bell pepper, diced | ½ cup washed and stemmed cilantro leaves |
| 5 garlic gloves, coarsely chopped | ¼ cup tomato paste |
| 2 shallots, coarsely chopped | 2 tbsp extra-virgin olive oil |
| 1 ripe tomato, peeled and seeded | 1 tbsp lime juice |
| 1 ½ tbsp capers, drained | salt and freshly ground black pepper to taste |

Combine the peppers, garlic, shallots, tomato, capers, oregano, and cilantro in a food processor and grind to a smooth puree. Work in the tomato paste, olive oil, lime juice, and salt and pepper.

Transfer the sauce to a clean jar with a nonreactive lid. Refrigerated, it will keep for 1 week.

Makes 2 cups.

No son princesas, son algo mas

por Rafael Cancel Miranda Sembrando Patria y Verdades

Cuentan mil cuentos de princesas,
de primeras damas y major vestidas,
nada cuentan de doña Petra,
que fregando platos educó sus hijas.

Y nada cuentan de doña Pastora, que murió jamona cuidando su madre,
y nada cuentan de doña Ramona, madre protectora de niños sin padres.

Y nada cuentan de Juana la campesina, que talaba tierra desde el amanecer,
y menos cuentan de la negra Josefina,
que robó para dar a sus hijos de comer.

No, ellas no eran de las mejor vestidas,
ni brillaban en las páginas sociales,
pero yo ante ellas rindo pleitesía, ¡porque eran verdaderas majestades!

Inside Dance . . .

One of the wonderful things about PRFDance is that one does not just learn about culture and folklore "of the past" . . . one can experience Puerto Rican traditions such as Bomba and Plena on a given Austin weekend. That's what some students in the PRFDance Teen Program recently found out during a social outing to an informal Bombazo BBQ.

Teacher China Lott expressed the importance of connecting the classroom with every day life. The Teen Program continues to grow and take shape in a manner that is sensitive to the needs of teens today. Mrs. Lott understands that kids who have positive adult role models are less likely to drop out of school, become pregnant, or otherwise succumb to unwanted peer pressure. "All the kids I work with are such great kids. In our social outings, they are very thoughtful...I want to be there for them as an adult friend and positive influence."

And the Teens are keeping busy—Early in the semester, PRFDance offered a 1-day teen dance workshop open to new and current students. "We wanted to put a fun spin on salsa by adding hip-hop elements," said Mrs. Lott. The successful workshop has opened the door to more ideas and events to come (Mrs. Lott currently leads an Aerobics class every Tuesday).

On Friday, May 7th, you can cheer on the Teens as they make an appearance at the May Festival at Plaza Saltillo. ¡Y pa' lante, muchachos!

Sembrando Herencia 2003—Las Caras de la Navidad

Sembrando Herencia is our Annual Recital that passes on our heritage to a new generation! In this joyful celebration of traditional dance, music and song, more than 50 of our own performed as our professional-level performing company shared the stage with the children, teens, and adults from our performing arts programs.

This year we took our audience on a journey through Puerto Rico's beloved Christmas traditions, from the mountains of our Island to the city of New York.

Sembrando Herencia 2003—Las Caras de la Navidad

The audience cheered loudly for the debut of Puerto Rican Folkloric Dance's own "Coro de Angeles" Youth choir and our new Percussion Students!

The performance ended with a sing-along to traditional Puerto Rican Christmas songs as our lively performance culminated in a Parranda!!!

Enjoy these memories!
